

The aim of this guide is to help you find ways to revise at home and arm you with materials to help with your learning. The following is not a comprehensive list and you should always find revision methods that suit your specific learning

Studying at home

There are so many ways to revise and resources to choose from. Be sure to look at all the available resources to find the ones that suit you.

ACHIEVE is an online learning platform which has resources for nearly all subjects and links to external resources and exam preparation including assessments to help students prepare for SQA exams.

- Here you can learn for your subject, use assessments and even self-evaluate your progress.

BBC bitesize offers up to date learning for each subject. You can test your knowledge at the end of the topic with a quiz as well.

Click the link and choose your subject: BITESIZE

Scholar has a summary of the key learning required for each subject, separated into topics. They have both multiple-choice questions and extended response questions you can answer to check your understanding. They even have a progress bar to see how far you have achieved through the course.

Your teacher can see your progress as well so you can work together in your revision.

Studying in school

There are many subject specific resources available upon request.

1. Discuss with your teacher the availability of revision resources in an area of the course you want material for.
2. Attend drop in sessions for your subject, usually run weekly, armed with specific questions to make the most of the time.
3. Ask your teachers for any revision websites they know of that would help with any key areas or topics you are struggling with
